IS YOUR SPACE HEATER A HAZARD?

The cold winter months often send people reaching for the thermostat. When you turn on the heat, if you are using portable, baseboard, or in-wall heaters, the Electrical Safety Foundation International reminds you not to turn off your attention to basic safety principles. ESFI offers these important safety tips for portable, baseboard and in-wall heaters.

1. Electric in-wall fan heaters should be cleaned at least twice a year. ESFI suggests cleaning prior to the onset of heating season and spring cleaning, after the heater has been used for a season.
2. Keep all furniture, draperies, and other household objects at least three feet from in-wall fan heaters and twelve inches away from baseboard heaters. Keep portable space heaters at least three feet from all flammable materials.
3. Plug portable space heaters directly into the outlet—do not use an extension cord.
4. If an in-wall or baseboard heater is shut off at the circuit breaker, be sure to lock or tag the circuit breaker to prevent someone from inadvertently turning it back on.
5. If you are installing a new heater, read all information labels, follow all safety precautions, and verify that the electrical supply wires are rated high enough for the electrical demand of the heater.
6. Some portable space heaters, electric in-wall fan heaters, and baseboard heaters have been subject to recalls. Check your brand and model number and visit www.recalls.gov for possible information on your heater.

By following these simple safety principles, you can help avoid potential hazards resulting from space heater use.

Are You Safely Using Woodworking Tools?

Woodworking tools can be dangerous if not used properly. The Ontario-based Canadian Center for Occupational Health and Safety offers these tips to keep you safe while getting the job done right.

1. Read the owner's manual carefully. Only use woodworking machines that you have been trained to use properly and safely.
2. Always wear safety glasses or goggles.
3. Wear dust masks when required.
4. Wear hearing protection that is suitable for the level and frequency of the noise you are exposed to in the woodworking area. If you have trouble hearing someone speak from three feet away, the noise level from the machine is too high.
5. Use gloves to protect hands from splinters when handling wood, but do not wear them near rotating blades and other machinery parts where the gloves can get caught in moving parts.
6. Before operating any equipment or machine, make sure that the machine guard is in position, is in good working condition, and guards the machine adequately. Check and adjust all other safety devices.
7. Make sure that the equipment is properly grounded before use.
8. Check that keys and adjusting wrenches are removed from the machine before turning on the power.
9. Inspect stock for nails or other materials before cutting, planing, routing or carrying out similar activities.
10. Make sure that all machines have start and stop buttons within easy and convenient reach of the operator. Start buttons should be protected by collars so that accidental contact will not start the machine.
11. Ensure that all cutting tools and blades are clean, sharp, and in good working order so that they will cut freely without force.

By following these simple tips, you can help protect yourself when using woodworking tools.

YOUR RIGHTS IF INJURED BY A VIOLENT CRIME
